EXTRACTS FROM THE JOURNAL OF A VOYAGE TO THE MEDITERRANEAN.

Chapter VI.

19th & 20th. The weather was wet and squally, as it had been every day since we had been out, and we began almost to forget what it was to have a serene sky and pleasant atmosphere. This was particularly aggravating, as a sea voyage to make the best of it affords but few pleasures.—For a time, it is true, curiosity may be gratified, but its food is scanty and soon exhausted. Each day presents the same prospect, and the same avocations—and the only change is that afforded by the aspect of the heavens. Not so the traveller, whose devious path leads over a variety of soil, and through many climates; whose adventurous feet, now clime the rugged precipice, and now are scorched by the burning sand of the wilderness, whose eye is now gladdened with the taste and opulence of crowded cities, and now is charmed with the native luxuriance of rural scenes; and who alternately pauses on the brow of the lofty mountain, or calmly sinks to repose in the bosom of the secluded vale. Every change in the atmosphere exhibits nature in a different garb, or shews him some new trait in the character of man. Wherever he turns his eye, he finds food for speculation, and although his path is rugged, and his body worn with fatigue, its exertions are amply rewarded by the pleasures and the knowledge that pour in upon the mind.

21st. This is the first fine day we have had, and the wind was fresh and fair. As I strolled about the deck enjoying the genial influence of the morning sun, I observed that our live stock—who no doubt had left their oaken couches for the same purpose--exhibited the most unequivocal symptoms of satisfaction. Whether they really expected to participate in the glory of the expedition, and hailed the breeze that wafted us towards our destined object; or whether they were delighted at being delivered from their apprehensions of sore throats, colds and consumptions, I could not at first determine. They certainly appeared to be greatly elated, and capered about and snuffed the air with much apparent gaiety. I was soon however informed, that I had mistaken for innocent festivity the prognostications of disaster; and that when a pig danced at sea it was a certain sign of an approaching storm. That these modest and unassuming animals should "play such fantastic tricks before high heaven" was certainly out of character; and it was extremely indecorous in them to be cutting their capers on the quarter deck of a vessel of war, where such liberties are not allowed even to the officers. But that they had any sinister design, I am not inclined to believe—for if they wished to invoke the genii of the air to hurl destruction about us, they certainly would have gone more quietly about it. But this is giving them a degree of power which I do not believe they possess—for I have learned by very hard experience, that to raise the wind is no easy matter. Nay I even go so far in scepticism as to doubt their foreknowledge on this subject—had they been Scotch pigs and gifted with second sight, then indeed--but yankee swine have surely no claim of that kind; and as I have read of the wind, that, "no man knows whence it cometh, or whither it goeth," I have no idea of allowing these quadrupeds to soar so far above us, as not only to know "whence it cometh' but even when it is coming. These were my ideas at the time—but when I ventured to express them I found they were all wrong, for I was assured, that years of naval experience had tested the fact that a pig was never merry except just before a storm. Hamlet says 'there are things in Heaven and earth Horatio, that are not dreamt of in your philosophy"—this must be one of them---for this is one of those things that a philosopher would be the last person in the world to dream of.

HAMILTON, (Bermuda,) Oct, 8.

Singular Accident.—A singular accident happened to the schooner Problem, Petty Hawkes, master and owner, on his voyage from hence to the West Indies—from thence he has just returned.

He relates, that on the 7th of Aug. being under the lee of the Island of Dominico, about 3 or 4 miles distant, standing in with a gentle breeze, for the town of Roseau, his vessel all of a sudden came up with her sails shaking in the wind. The crew immediately sung out that she had struck upon a rock; but as captain Hawkes knew the water in that neighborhood was noted for being very deep, he sprang on deck and discovered a fish, apparently about 30 feet long; rising up to the top of the water astern, and bleeding very profusely.

It was conceived at the moment that the schooner had merely struck upon the fish as it lay asleep, and that the keel had wounded it, which caused the flood of blood that tinged the water. But on discharging the cargo at Barbadoes, the horn of a fish was found sticking up 4 inches in the hold, after having in an oblique direction pierced through a 2 inch oak plank on the outside, and part of a timber and a 2 inch plank in the ceiling. This horn, which still remains in the vessel's bottom, may now be seen, by calling on board the said schr. Problem, in St. George's Harbor.

Cobbett has come out against Sir Francis Burdett! He denounces him as an intriguer, as a lukewarm friend, perhaps a secret enemy of Parliamentary Reform. His last Number contains an address to Henry Hunt whom he wishes to bring forward as a candidate for Westminister. The Register no longer preserves its original strength. There is too much sameness, repetition and egotism. The spirit has run off, and we are getting down to the lees.—Cobbett muss diversify his theme, or the Register will lose its credit. Tom Paine said that a writer showed his sense as much by knowing when to stop as when to write. For his own part he never would write himself out. But even Paine was mistaken. Rich. Enq.

DETROIT, Oct. 17.

We learn with pleasure that two officers of the 5th regt. have been dispatched to Put-in-Bay Island, for the purpose of removing to this place the remains of the gallant lieut. Brooks, late of the Marine Corps, who was killed in the memorable battle of lake Erie, on the 10th of Sept. 1813; and we further learn that arrangements have been made by the officers of the 5th regt. for interring the body at this place with the honors of war, and for erecting a suitable monument to the memory of the distinguished deceased. This tribute to departed worth, coming from the officers of a regt. raised in the state of which it. Brooks was a native, and most of whom were personally acquainted with his merits and gallantry, cannot fail to afford gratification to the relatives of the deceased, while at the same time it reflects credit on those who have undertaken the laudable object. The citizens, we understand are to be invited to join in the procession on the arrival of the body at this place.

An Elephants Gallantry.

PETERSBURG April 2, 1817.

A wooden house has been built for the elephants with which the Emperor has been presented by the Shah of Persia; the male is seventeen feet high, and is the same upon which the Persian monarch used to ride under an awning. Some Persians have remained here to attend these animals. A very curious circumstance occurred a few days since. A lady who often came to see the elephant, was accustomed to bring him bread, apples, &c. One day the animal, by way of shewing his gratitude, seized the lady with his trunk, and put her upon his back, on the place where the driver usually sits. The poor woman, terrified by this unexpected piece of gallantry, shrieked violently, and begged to be taken down; but the Persians assured her that it was far more prudent to remain where she was. She was, therefore, obliged to wait till the elephant laid hold of her again, and set her down as gently as he had before lifted her up. [Panorama.

"BLACK EYED SUSAN."

Gay wrote this well known ballad upon Mrs. Montford, a celebrated actress, contemporary with Cibber. After her retirement from the stage, love, and the ingratitude of a bosom friend, deprived her of her senses, and she was placed in a receptacle for lunaticks. One day, during a lucid interval, she asked her attendant what play was to be performed that evening, and was told that it was Hamlet; in this tragedy, while on the stage, she had ever been received with rapture in Ophelia. The recollection struck her, and with that cunning which is so often allied to insanity, she eluded the care of the keepers, and got to the theatre, where she concealed herself until the scene in which Ophelia enters in her insane state; she then pushed on the stage, before the lady who had performed the previous part of the character could come on, and exhibited a more perfect representation of madness than the utmost exertions of mimick art could effect. She was, in truth, Ophelia herself, to the amazement of the performers, and to the astonishment of the audience. Nature having made this last effort, her vital powers failed her. On going off she exclaimed, "It is all over!"—She was immediately conveyed back to her late place of security, and a few days after,

"She, like a lily drooping,
Then bowed her head, and died."

London paper.

In Massachusetts it is necessary that a Candidate, to be elected, should have a majority of the whole number of votes, that is to say, that he should have more votes than all the other candidates together. In consequence of this, it is a very common thing in that state to have two or three elections, before either candidate obtains such a majority; and in two Congressional districts recently, five trials were made without success! On the sixth trial in one of these districts the Republican candidate was elected; but in the other, no choice was made, and a seventh election must be held. This practice produces so much inconvenience to the citizens by the number of elections they must attend before a choice is made, and such injustice to the district in depriving it for so long a time of a Representative, that we suspect it will be abandoned before long, and the principle substituted that he who has the most votes, or more than any other candidate, shall be considered elected. This principle already prevails in most of the states.

RUMORS OF THE DAY.

It was, some time since, announced in the Baltimore Federal Gazette, as the rumor of the day, "that Caesar A. Rodney, John Graham, and Walter Jones, esqrs. were appointed commissioners to proceed to South America, for purposes which had been rather guessed at than explained: that Mr. Jones had declined proceeding on the mission; and, that it was not then known whether another commissioner had been or would be appointed to succeed him,"

The Gazette, of Saturday last, contains the following additional rumors on the same subject:—"Report now says, that the Hon. Theodoric Bland, one of the judges of Baltimore County Court, is offered the appointment of commissioner with a compensation at the rate of six thousand dollars per annum, and a like sum for outfit. It is supposed that judge Bland will accept the appointment, and of course resign his office in the judiciary of this state.

"Report further says, that the frigate Congress is to convey the commissioners to their port of destination, and will be ready to sail in a few days.

"H. M. Brackenridge, esq. now in Washington, has long been spoken of as the secretary to this intended mission. He is also, we believe truly, considered the author of a pamphlet addressed to President Monroe, pointing out and urging to the government of the United States, the propriety of acknowledging the independence of some of the newly formed republics in South America. These circumstances connected, might lead to a probable guess at the intention of the executive, and the object of the mission."

LADY MORGAN.

In her late work, on France, speaking of the religious processions, which have been revived in that country, remarks:—"To overload religion with forms and ceremonies, is always to injure its cause. Truth wants no ornament; religion is, in itself an abstraction; "the evidence of things unseen."

ELEMENTS OF PHYSIOGNOMY.

From the Spanish.

He who has a low forehead and full of wrinkles, will look like a monkey.

He who has a high forehead, will have his eyes under it, and will live all the days of his life, and this is infallible.

He who has a long nose, will have the more to blow, and the better to handle.

A great mouth from ear to ear signifieth much foam and no bridle; but are not hard mouthed, but ill mouthed.

A little mouth drawn up like a purse denotes darkness within, and looks more like a loophole than a window.

A watery mouth that splutters when it speaks and overflows when it laughs, will have need of a slobbering bib.

Whoever has frizly or black hair will put the barber to much trouble, and he who has vermin will often scratch his head.

He that is bald will have no hair, & if he happens to have any, it will not be in the bald place.

Hrmonya Aug. 29, 1817.

Mrs. & Miss Brevost

RESPECTFULLY inform the public, that they have removed their

Seminary for Young Ladies, to that large and commodious house, the property of Col. O'Hara, on Scotch-hill, corner of [illegible] and Grant street. The superior accommodations afforded by their present dwelling, will enable them to receive some addition to their number of pupils; and the list of accomplishments which they formerly taught, has received an important accession, in the assistance of a lady and gentleman who are well qualified to give instruction on the Harp and Guitar, and in drawing and painting.

They flatter themselves that by this combination of talent, joined to their long experience in the duties of instruction, the young ladies of the Western country will find in this SEMINARY every advantage possessed by the best similar establishments on the continent.

They cannot conclude on this occasion without renewing to their patrons, their most sincere and lively acknowledgements, for the constant support they have received during the last three years, and they pledge themselves that no effort on their part shall be wanting to merit a continuance.

PITTSBURGH.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1817.

DIED—On Tuesday morning last, in the 60th year of his age Major ABRAHAM KIRKPATRICK.

A letter from Natchez under date of October 23d, to a gentleman in this city, says—"The entire population of this place is now compelled to seek a refuge in the country, from the effects of a most fatal contagion which has prevailed for some time. I have no doubt but that the infection was brought to this place by the Steam-boats, which have constantly plied between New-Orleans and this city.

A writer in the Commonwealth, with the signature of Lodona, having most zealously attacked the author of those "extracts from the journal of a voyage to the Mediterranean" which we have been, and continue publishing in this Gazette, on account of certain opinions expressed therein, unfavourable to the character of the common sailors, and as our author is, and has been for some time absent, we will not enter into a vindication of his sentiments, but prefer giving the following communication on the subject.

To Mister Lodona, by way of congratulation for his defence of the moral character of sailors &c.

I always admired that elegant sentiment of Master Muggins in Goldsmith's "Mistakes of a Night" "The genteel thing's the genteel thing at any time; if so be as how a gentleman bee's in a concatination accordingly" It is therefore impossible for me to withhold my admiration from the "unparagoned" eloquence of your production (if I may use a phrase of your own coining) I therefore tender you this testimony of my most profound and exalted consideration.

Being a kind of sailor myself—having been all the way to Kentucky in a keel boat, and up the Alleghany in a canoe, besides divers consortings and contraternizing communications and goodly exercitations of my humour with several full blooded sons of the ocean, namely at the bar room of my much respected and very respectable host of the——and being now schoolmaster and inkeeper myself, to wit of whiskey, beer and cakes, at the sign of ——all which several occupations and functions I predict and believe you to have filled; I felt all at once on reading your vindication for the fifth time; at which time I just began to comprehend somewhat of the meaning and object of it--I felt, I say, an instinctive good will---a sympathy; or as you most "admirably and conspicuously" express it, "the animating impulse of nature" patriotically indubitably and all that.

I have now so far mastered your piece, as to be able to recite some passages of it in a very peculiar manner, with most striking and startling effect; having been happily gifted with a voice like the brazen lungs which Virgil coveted so much; together with great muscular management of pace, excepting a little irregular paralytic motion of my lower jaw; and having very unusual and expressive features.—It was only this morning that I so far confounded the poor intellect of my little old wife, as to occasion her to send for the doctor to consult about my case—and all merely by my eloquent and emphatic manner of delivering the following sentences in your letter.

"When the lurid storms of war forsook the dismal cave into which Washington & his Spartan band had precipitated them, directing their flight to the shores of freedom, and eclipsing the horizon where friendship and peace had long united in lulling the weary native to rest." &c.

Yet, nevertheless, notwithstanding the cordial assent I give to your original notions and admirable assertions, suffer me to be humbly guilty of the presumption of questioning the correctness of one of your doubts. When you say that "From the various degrading epithets which this gentleman has laid to the charge of the sailor, we can select but one that bears the mark of probability which is, the excessive use of ardent spirits." You imply a sort of censure which I cannot acquiesce in. Had you spoken of the actual quantity and quality which they commonly use: and placed it to the account of what you call the "moderate application of spirits essentially necessary &c, to sustain that noble dignity which characterizes the American sailor," it would have prevented our reputation from being "tarnished by the insipid and fallacious malice" of our assailant. After the comparison you so happily drew between the sailor and Cowper's devout preacher

"Whose hands are pure; whose doctrine and whose life coincident, etc.
Whose actions say, that they respect themselves," your insinuations about the sailors' habits of hard drinking is most unmerited—it is, as all the world knows, a charge "wholly, totally and entirely" false. It was at all events a concession which our adversary could not claim, and a hearty candour which the disengenuous world may misinterpret. You observe that if the voyage writer be correct, that is, if the sailors are the mean, debauched & degraded beings that they are represented to be, it is our duty to skreen their faults from the public eye; and as I do not doubt but that you act upon this principle yourself, we must therefore endeavour to smother the truth, which you and I very well know between us. It is particularly for this reason, that I admire your ingenuity, in drawing off the attention of readers from the subject in hand, by the flourishing, swaggering talk about "bleak winds and fiery orbs, boisterous elements and the raging tempests that convulse the watery world," together with the "ample and expansive bosom of the ethereal vault;" all which tornado of words must very soon put these land lubbers out of their reckoning.

OLD BUNG.

In the State of Vermont primitive simplicity prevails in perhaps a greater degree than in any state in the Union. There is as yet no Bank in the State! Propositions are before the Legislature for incorporating three.

The Floridas.—It is stated in the Philadelphia Democratic Press, that "Captain Arnold, of the ship Lucy, from Bordeaux has brought out despatches for government from the American Minister at the Court of Spain. It is presumed that these despatches relate to the negociations carrying on between the United States and Spain as to the purchase of the Floridas. It is distinctly understood, on very good authority, that G. Britain has said to Spain, "If you choose to keep the Floridas, it is well; but if you determine to sell them, we think we have a right to the preference, and we shall expect the first offer." This language has offended and embarrassed the Court of Madrid, although we do not believe it will influence its determination; indeed we feel confident that determination is made, and is now in the United States. We come to this conclusion from a knowledge of the fact that the Spanish Minister, Don Onis, has at this moment in his possession sealed despatches from his Court, which despatches he is directed not to open until the meeting of Congress"!!!

HORRORS OF WAR.

The following passage, which relates to the retreat of the French army from Moscow, is extracted from the "sketch of Russia, just published by Sir Robert Wilson."

"In the Hospitals of Wilna there were above 17,000 dead and dying, frozen and freezing. The bodies of the former BROKEN UP, served to stop the cavities in windows, floors, and walls; but in one of the corridores of the Great Convent, above 1,500 bodies were piled up transversely, as pigs of lead or iron. When those were finally removed on sledges to be buried, the most extraordinary figures were presented by the variety of their attitudes, for none seemed to have been broken in a composed state; each was fixed in the last action of his life: in the last direction given to his limbs; even the eyes retained the last expression, either of anger, pain or entreaty.

"In the roads, men were collected round the burning ruins of the cottages, which a mad spirit of destruction had fired, picking and eating the burnt bodies of their fellow men; while thousands of horses were moaning in agony with their flesh mangled and hacked, to satisfy the cravings of a hunger that knew no pity. In many of the sheds, men scarcely alive, had heaped upon their frozen bodies, human carcasses, which festering by the communication of animal heat, had mingled the dying and the dead in one mass of putrefication.

MILLEDGEVILLE, (Georgia) Oct. 21.

We learn from a source entitled to credit, that the Seminole Indians have refused to comply with the demand of General Gains, requiring the surrender of the murderers of citizens on the St. Mary's river last spring—and that they justify the conduct of their people on the score of retaliation, alledging that the whites were the first aggressors. A rupture with them is consequently unavoidable, and the drafts from the state should immediately prepare for a short campaign as their services will probably be wanted.

The plague was raging with great violence at Algiers. Towards the end of July from two to three hundred persons died daily. Almost all the inhabitants of Bona, have perished. The foreign consuls have retired into the country.

In a Dutch translation of Cato, the version of the soliloquy is curious—thus does it commence:—Just so—you are in the right Mynheer Plato.

Valuable Property For Sale.

FOUR LOTS

SITUATE on the West bank of the Monongahela river, being part of that tract generally known by the name of TROY FARM.

Lot No. 2, contains 65 acres 40 perches—a good proportion of bottom and hill land well timbered; on the hill a barn and on the river a fine orchard of choice fruit-trees with a handsome meadow adjoining.

Lot No. 3, contains 57 acres, also a good proportion of hill and bottom land, rich meadow, elegant sugar camp, comfortable tenant's house and stable, with a spring of fine water convenient.

Lot No. 4, contains 57 acres 120 perches, chiefly rich bottom, all cleared, with sufficient hill land, well timbered.

Lot No. 5, contains 54 acres 110 perches, wide bottom, all under cultivation taking in a portion of hill land covered with heavy timber.

The above lots are elegantly situated, 6 miles from the city of Pittsburgh.—Any persons wishing to attend market with the produce of their gardens would find these lots well calculated for their purpose: the soil luxuriant and productive with a proper exposure, and conveniently situated close on the bank of a delightful stream, by which they could transport their 'vegetable store' to a market where it would command the highest prices.

Or any gentlemen wishing to secure pleasant and healthful retreats for their families during the sultry months of summer, would find the natural situation of these lots such as to admit of any improvement convenience might suggest or the hand of taste direct.

Terms of Sale are as follows.

One fifth of the purchase money to be paid at the time of sale and the rest in five years, bearing interest, to be paid annually and to be secured by a mortgage or otherwise.—Persons wishing to purchase may obtain more particlar information on application to Mr Samuel Peebles on the premises, or Dunning M'Nair Jr. Wilkinsburgh, who has a diagram of the lots, or on Walter Forward esq. who has also a diagram, or on the subscriber in Greensburgh,

If the lots are not disposed of before the first of April next, they will then be exposed at public sale in the city of Pittsburgh,

THE subscriber has invented and obtained a patent for cutting and bending links to make chain of different sizes.

Chain made of those links will have a superior advantage over the chain made in the common way as the iron is first drawn into a wire which makes each link of an equal thickness and more beautiful and strong than the common chain.

To the wholesale merchant they will be sold at 21 doll. per dozen. The links will likewise be sold to blacksmiths or others at 28 dolls. per hundred pounds with the necessary complement of rings, each chain requires six pound of links.

Orders accompanied with the cash will be promptly attended to by the subscriber at his works adjoining Pittsburgh.
